New York Post

NEW YORK, MONDAY, JANUARY 22, 1945

aseball Pushes Plan for Use)† Kids in Wake of 4-F Edict

CHAMPION-Marion Hanley of Staten Island, who won the women's Middle Alantic speed chating title yesterday at New-

Fight Clubs

Join March

This is Infantile Paralysis Week in boxing, so designated by Chairman Eddie Eagan of the State

Athletic Commission, and both the St. Nicholas Arena and the Broadway Arena are set to make contributions to the March of Dimes.

Bell. The change was made to-day at the weighing in ceremonies in the Boxing Commission. 8 of-fices, because Bell—who sur-prised Washington fans by lastprised washington Ians by last-ing the three rounds against Joe Louis on the Bomber's exhibition tour—had never fought a 10-round bout before. Menichelli stopped Lorient Bouchard in 9 rounds at Newark last Monday night

Bryant to Face Agosta

night.

Of Dimes

Associated Press Photo

Rocking and reeling under the impact of the War Dept.'s latest ouncement that all 4F athletes must be passed by the depart-it itself before being rejected, baseball and other sports still ed to ride out the storm today. There was no change in the plan ontinue unless shut down by definite government order.

s Leo Durocher summed it up pertinently last week after one look at the situation wing his return from the an war front, baseball is goto have to carry on with kids old men.

further tip-off on that draslan came late last week when American Legion announced it was throwing open its ers to the big leagues and making it possible for or-zed ball to utilize the best of 500,000 youngsters when-needed. That there aren't kids of less than 18 in that array who can't fill the de-d ranks seems inconceiva-st year saw the first of them the bills of their caps over dugout steps—like Joe Nux-16-year-old rookie hurier of 16-year-old rookie hurier of Reds; Eddie Miksis and Tom m, Dodger juveniles who ed some fine ball in the late m; and a handful of others. n't forget, too, that te kid ad Mel Ott was only 16 when fined John McGraw's Giants 324 and that he never was ed out to any other club. Joe all, the toy bulldog who be a great third baseman for a great third baseman for fankees in their glory days, just 18 when he stepped into hoes of the late Ray Chapafter the great Cleveland stop had been killed by a ed ball in the Polo Grounds 20. He was one of the sparks e Indians' drive to a pennant a World Series triumph over Dodgers that fall.

Dodgers that fall. eddie Lindstrom wasn't much when he played a great third for the Giants in the 1924 d Series against the Senators. e have been others, too, but point is that the kids of 17 s can play some pretty ball.

y ball seball has dropped off in cali-very season since Peari Har-Baseball purists would have horrified at the brand of played last year as meas-by pre-war standards. But 'as exciting, hell-for-leather at that. It produced the great-American League race since l of which only goes to show the competition rather than skill that counts. If the teams all stripped down to the bone action should be tremendous. e'll be no Cardinal powers e running away from the

† Has Long Reach

leson, Ariz., Jan. 22 (AP)—
long arm of Selective Service
long arm of Selective Service hed out to grab Jimmy JohnDetroit golf pro, while he participating in the Tucson open. Johnson, 33, the er of one child, left the curwinter tour last night.

Akhattans Top Americs

ie Brookhattans defeated the Y. Americans, 2-1, in an rican Soccer League game erday at Starlight Park. erday at Starlight Park. ir league games were posted because of the condition he playing fields.

). Johnny Melius Weds

Greenville, S. C., Jan. 22 (AP)—War Mobilization Di-rector James F. Byrnes defi-nitely lan't interested in becoming high commissioner of base-ball after the war.

Sports Editor Carter (Scoop) Latimer of the Greenville News proposed the idea recently in his column and the suggestion was endorsed by several baseball officials.
But Byrnes in a letter to Latimer said thanks, but under no circumstances would he be interested.

Hockey Massacre In Boston!

Special to The Post

Boston, Jan. 22-It was a massacre, mates! And those hapless New York Rangers, who last season were on the receiving end as Detroit set a 15-goal league record, became country cousins here again last night as the Boston Bruins skated rough-shod over the Blue Shirts to chalk up a 14-3 triumph.

Sitting in on the fun (from the Boston point of view) was Lieut. Comdr. Weston Adams, Bruin Boston point of view) was Lieut. Comdr. Weston Adams, Bruin president, who is just home from the Pacific. Sparked by the veteran Bill Cowley, who tallied four times, Boston broke its own scoring record and pulled four points ahead of the fifth-place Rangers. Kenny Smith obliged with the three-goal "hat trick."

The first period saw the Bruit.

Dimes.

Ten per cent off the top—at the St. Nick tonight and the Broadway tomorrow night—will go to polio victims. Promotors, fight, ers and managers will all add to the donations.

At the St. Nick Fernando (the Mighty) Menichelli, Argentine heavyweight, is tangling with Vince Pimpinella of South Brooklyn, who is substituting for Jimmy Bell. The change was made today at the weightingin caracteristics. with the three-goal "hat trick."
The first period saw the Bruil.s register five times, although the New Yorkers did r.anage to squeeze in a goal. The second stanza was all Boston with five more goals. The Bruins seemed to bog down in the third quarter—they got but four—while the visitors dented the net for two.

Canadiens' Toe The Canadiens' Toe Blake, league's leading scorer, has been suspended indefinitely by Red Durton, NHL president, for striking the Rangers' Walt Atanas during Saturday night's game at Montreal. The Blue Shirts lost that, too, but only by a 5-2 score.

'Five Foul Rule' Here to Stay, Says Veteran Court Coach

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 22 (AP)

Lt. Sax Elliott, veteran coach of the Jacksonville Nav. Air Station Filare. tion Fliers, says the five foul rule is here to stay.

Adopted as a wartime measure by the college basketballers, the rule permits a college cager to commit five fouls instead of four before he is banished from the

"Five fouis enliven the game and add an extra sting to it," said Elliott.

Hockey Standings

Bryant to Face Agosta

The Broadway bill is topped by Marvin Bryant, exisoldier, and Joe Agosta, East New York welterweight. The eight-rounder is a return engagement, Agosta having won the first one. Matchmaker Max Joss has invited Sgt. Harry Myrand, the war hero who is back in Brooklyn after two years in Europe, to be his guest at the ringside tomorrow night. Ridgewood Grove will stage both a boxing and a wrestling show next month, with the customary 10 per cent going to the National Foundation. It is hoped that the Commission will sanction and the Garden management agree to a collection of dimes Priday picks with the Victorian and the Commission of dimes Priday picks with the Victorian and the Commission with the Commission will be compared to the Commission with the Commission with

Orson Welles' Almanac

By Orson Welles =

January 22, 1945.

Our Astrology Department says that this is a good day for those born under all signs, and for planting all things that grow above the ground.

Byron was born today, and so was D. W. Griffith, the greatest of all motion picture directors. Twenty-eight years ago today Woodrow Wilson told the Senate that it was necessary for the American government "in the days to come to lay afresh and upon American government "in the days to come to lay alresh and upon a new plan the foundations of peace among the nations. It is inconceivable," said he, "that the people of the United States should play no part in that great enterprise. Is the present war," he asked, "a struggle for a just and secure peace, or only for a new planner of power. There must be not only a balance of power, but a community of power, not organized rivalries, but an organ. but a community of power; not organized rivalries, but an organized common peace. . . These are American principles, American policies, and they are also the principles of mankind and must prevail."

đ

Inauguration

The day before yesterday was the forty-sixth inauguration of the American Presidency. The whole affair was as simple as any body can remember. If you've been married more than twice, you like your wedding to be small and quiet. I think that's how the President felt about this inauguration. He played his part in the ritual like a veteran bridegroom. I was there, and I got the impression that this fourth term was his favorite wife.

The inauguration of a president really is a kind of herrothal

The inauguration of a president really is a kind of betrothatith promises to love, honor and obey. I always feel like crying at a wedding, and that's how I felt Saturday.

This oath taking is democracy's most solemn occasion. It fills the watcher with an awesome sense of history, the President's hand on the Bible, marking a boundary between the future and the past. I found myself thinking of the presidents who've gone before— the great and good and ordinary, the well-remembered, the men

Ω. V3 ... In his portraits George Washington looks the perfect figure of poise, but his voice shook so that the men could scarcely hear it. That first inauguration was in New York, on an open nalcony overlooking Wall Street.

... They named the new capital "Washington," and Jefferson took office there. It was little more than a frontier crossroads in those days, a clearing in the wilderness. There was a mile of swamp between the Capitol and the White House, and Pennsylvania Avenue was nothing but a stretch of dirty mud. John Adams had been driven to the ceremony in a gilded coach drawn by six white horses, but Jefferson walked quietly from his lodgings to the Capitol to take his oath.

Θ. 2.0

Enter Andy Jackson

... Then there was Andy Jackson, the first President from the ... Then there was Andy Jackson, the first President from the West. He was the idol of the backwoods, and from the wildest country, from the depths of our American forest, the common man came crowding into Washington to cheer Old Hickory. The common man trooped after the new President to the executive mansion. He muddied up the carpets and stood on the chairs, he broke furniture and yanked the draperies from the walls. Mighty tubs of punch had to be set up on the White House lawn to lure the common man outside . . . That was his day and he didn't care who knew it.

. . And Lincoln's inauguration, the first one-with Stephen Douglas taking Abe's old stove pipe hat and holding it during the President's address . . And four years after that (the President four years older) "with malice toward none, with charity to all, with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right.

... Teddy Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson... And in a memories, Coolidge and Hoover and Franklin Roosevelt. . . And in our easy

The Biggest Job

The last of these came into office when the fundamental propositions of the government he had been called to lead were held in bitter doubt. Today, when the propositions of the Atlantic Charter bitter doubt. Today, when the propositions of the Abantic Charter seem questioned, when there are many who challenge the moral existence of the United Nations and the possibility of "an organized common peace," what Franklin Roosevelt told us twelve years ago is worth remembering: "We have nothing to fear but fear itself."

I think the man who said that is man enough for America's blurgest job which is the blurgest job in history.

biggest job, which is the biggest job in history.

Army Ski Veteran Shines Van Putten Wins Spec 1 Skating Title

Newburgh, Jan. 22, (AP)—A discharged veteran of the U. S. Army ski troops wears the Middle Atlantic men's speed skating crown today.

Herman Van Putten of the Preakness Farms Skating Club, Paterson, N. J., captured the championship yesterday by defeating Joe Bree of New York's Grand Street Boys by five yards in a selection?

"But hold on, Joe, there's more sense and meaning behind this can just that. We didn't fight solely for double chocolate malteds, it mattresses, better plumbing and clean sheets... We've paved to way for international law and order—not the survival of the stest. The little fellows can now live as well as the big—free om fear, want and prejudice—nations as well as men."

Policeman Charged With Attacking Girl, 17

Patrolman Michael Cinquenani, attached to the Gates Av., rooklyn, station, was arrested today charged with attacking a '-year-old girl.

The policeman, 27, who has en 18 months in the departent, is married and the father two children. He lives at 1279 eKalb Av., Brooklyn.

The girl's mother filed the comaint at the Grand Av. station id said the policeman had cked up her daughter in Prosect Park last April and had had tercourse with her in the park en. On later occasions, the other said, the policeman took is girl to a Brooklyn hotel and is girl is now pregnant.

The policeman admitted the large and has been suspended om duty, the District Attorney's fice said.

lary Pickford Has a Cold

Mary Pickford was confined to er Waldorf-Astoria suite today ith a mild cold, which prevented er from starting on a two-week our for the National Foundation or Infantile Paralysis.

Meet ORSON WELLES Columnist

On stage, screen or on the air, Orson Welles has always made headlines. Now he writes them in an instructive, entertaining, mirth-provoking commentary on outstanding personalities, current news and coming events. Read "Orson Welles" Almanac" daily.

STARTS MONDAY, JAN. 22nd

New York Post

would punis

Wa The Comn nomir as An last A the O fairs

The

CORK Service Totest Goo

is is a story of a Ukrainian village during the war, when Miralas was occupied by a German garrison. As the story commander is making a last desperate attempt to break ance of the grandfathers, the women and the children in. Who are these peasants who change so quickly from and housewives into warriors? One is Fedosya, been killed by the Germans and whose home is occupied the German Captain Werner and his Russian mistress, Pussy, atther is Olena, who has fought with the guerrillas but has burned to her native village to bear her baby. There are many here in this story which depicts the horrors of Nazi andiam of the courage of simple people.

WANDA WASILEWSKA

The woman in the bed pouted peevishly.

"Why should I get up? You're always out . . . I'm so You go about your business and I have to stay here th this ugly woman. You'll see, one day she'll poison me.

"Little silly! You are mistress re, understand? Why are you red? Play the gramophone, three got records enough, or all a book. I spend every free suits with you. But there's a Something crops up all time

She gave no reply, reached to the underwear lying on a lar near by, raised herself near by, raised neason way, and began to dress. Kurt is the got up from the bed, is down on the wooden bench, distantined her. Yes, he liked a well enough. Otherwise he said not have carted her about him for three whole months e German officer took a parfrom his pocket.

Well, baby, I just looked in va minute to give you just bit chocolate. I must go, I'm very sy today. Have a good time I sy today. Il in't be late.

Nazi Way He kissed her lightly and lett inly trying to warm them. rang to attention when he saw to officer, who passed him and ned to the square. The large use, formerly the seat of the Soviet, now the German mmardantur, was crowded th soldiers, who drew them ves up and saluted as the offi entered. He hardly returned ir greeting and pushed oper door of his improvised office ling over his shoulder.

He sat down at his desk and whed. Lucky Pussy! She could y in bed until all hours, while had to get up at dawn and ik all day and yet his whole ck all day was full of unfinished bus:

soldiers brought in a woman aring a thick sheepskin coal dark dress.

The stood heavily and aukward in front of the table. Hair gray at the temples showed under r shawl; the face was plain, agh-hewn, a common peasant

'Your name?

Olena Kostyuk The German officer sat this The German officer sar facisity a pencil in his fingers and rowing stealthy glances at the man standing in front of him, less the soldiers had made a stake, he thought, he was in a long and unpleasant in streating to the best the streating to the less than the streating to the state of the streating to the streating to the streating to the streating stigation, to judge by the solute line of the chin and the ady eyes staring him in the

You have been out with the erritias?

She was neither frightened nor stused. Her eyes never left i face as she replied: Yea, I was out with the guer

Why did you come back to village? What did they send a here for?" Nobody sent me. I came on

"Come now. You were out with the guerrillas and now you suddenly come home to the village? Is there no discipline in that gang of yours?"

"I came on my own. I couldn't

"Why so suddenly?"

The woman's lips moved sound-

You saw that all this guerflia business was nonsense, a crime, just banditry? You didn't want to take part in it any more?"
"No, I couldn't any more."
"Why?"

She hesitated, made an effort, and then said straight into those watery, blinking eyes: home for the birth." "What?"

"I came to bear my child."
"So that's it!"

"So that's it!" .
He laughed, and the woman shivered at that eachfing hourse laughter.

"Surely you're not feeling cold in here? There's a good fire and yet you are wrapped up as if it wers, freezing. Take off that were freezing.

Obediently she threw the heavy nik shawl off her shoulders and laid it on the seat.

Take off your coat!"

She hesitated an instant, ther nouttoned and took off her neepskin. He watched her inunbuttoned the watched her intently No, there could be no doubt. She was near her time. The woman breathed travity. unbuttoned

The man knew that standing on her feet was hard on her and purposely prolonged the interview played with his pencil, and left longer and longer pauses be-tween his questions.

She readily replied to all ques-tions concerning herself. Yes, she was married. Her husband had been killed in the war. Long ago, before the revolution, she had worked on the land, reaping the master's corn, milking the master's cows. After the revolu-tion she worked on a collective from she worked on a collective farm. She joined the guerrilla group as soon as it was formed. She had kept her condition a se-cret from them. When her time was approaching and she found it difficult to move about, she returned to the village. She wanted to give birth to her child in peace.

"Oh, yes, give birth to the child in peace," he repeated, "Was it you who blew up the bridge last

Who helped you?"

"No one I did it alone."
"You lie. We know all about it, so you had better talk.

alone

"All right. group?" She gave no Where is your gave no reply. Her dark sin gave no reply. Her dark eyes looked calmly into his. He heaved a sigh. Same old story. Stubborn silence, long, fruitless questioning, all sorts of unpleax antness, and usually all in vain

(Continued tomorrow)

Drove up here after dark to satisfy a desire of many years. I had always wondered whether the abundant native life of the redman, as portrayed before the Glant Pueblo here by day, was for tourist purposes or the real thing. This third oldest settlement in the United States dates back to about 1600, though the exact age of the two five-story communal pueblos is not known. But, for more than 300 years without a break, several thousand redmen have lived, worked and earned their living here. In recent years, tourists by the thousands have flocked here every summer and, for the past half century, Taos has been a mecca for artists too.

Throughout the daylight hours in the big red-stoned plaza between the Giant Pueblos, the redman has squatted on the ground selling native-woven bankets, tourquise beads, hammered-silver tourqoise beads, hammered-silver bracelets, buckskin slippers, belts, rugs and a dozen other items. Sometimes, in pre-war days, as many as 5,000 tourist automobiles would be parked at one time just outside "the gate."

Last night it was just the opposite. Flurries of snow lashed by a freezing mountain gale swept across the plaza. Yellow lamplight pierced the darkness. Hust ling Indians swathed in white blankets—giving them more the blankets-giving them more the appearance of Arabs-hurried to and fro. An Indian woman, head and shoulders encased in a bright colored shawl, papoose strapped on her back, climbed slowly up one of the rough-hewn, hand made ladders to the second floor of her abode. Somewhere, way off, a welrd, entirely unearthly tribal chant permeated the can-yons and came floating down over the square. It was the In-dian version of the well known tobacco auctioneer's acceptance cry and sounded actually not unlike it'

Of Taos' 1,000 inhabitants, 218 are in the armed forces, four of them Waes! Not a single Indian in the entire community sought deferment, and only two redmen were rejected as physically unfit! That is believed to be the highest per-capita average in the United per-capita average in the United States today, it is certainly mute evidence of President Truman's forceful point, in his military service speech before the Congress, of the need for a healther ration. These needle, who have nation. These people, who have no electricity, no sanitation, none of the other refinements of life or creature comforts as we know them, have practically no sick-ness either. They live today al-most exactly as they have lived for hundreds of years, ignoring and rather abhoring the ways of the white man.

Last night, they stood around my jallopy, chattering in low tones, occasionally asking for cig-arets. I dropped in upon their storekeeper, who is just back at-ter 23 months in the Navy in the ter 21 months in the Navy in the Pacific. A heavy set, jolly fellow, he appeared amazed to see visitors at that time of night. In fact, he said, since the war only a handful of people come to Taos each week. Outside 'the gate,' I had a chail with White Eagle, the jeweler who hammers out the heavy as silver, etabled believed. broad silver slabbed belts. "Whitey" was all hot and both-ered over the duplication in New York and Chicago of the famed hand made Navajo rugs and jew-elry. Because of the high price hand made Navajo rugs and jew-elry. Because of the high price of silver and of turquoise, a ma-jor source of Indian levelihood is being taken away. For Instance, "Whitey" sajd, it is impossible, for lack of qualified gem-cutters and silversmiths, to turn out even secondigrade turquoise rings at less than $18 apiece. The very same ring, machine-made back east, can be fabricated for about a third! Thus, claims Mr. White third! Thus, claims Mr. White Eagle (he isn't the famed Chief White Eagle!), most tourists think they are being gypped when curlo-stores along the Navajo curlo-stores along the Navajo Trail charge the prices they do for the real thing.

Orson Welles Today 11/4

🚉 l Get a Driver's License

By Orson Welles

For the last 10 or 11 years I have been learning to drive a It says in the papers I'm going to run for the Senate. Anything is possible in the atomic age, and if I ever should get into public office my first official act would be to investigate the means by which a man can get a driver's license.

I got mine by standing in a long queue. Splendid practice for army life, or attendance at the Paramount, but quite unrelated. I should think, to operating an auto in traffic. True, I was requested to identify two or three of the larger letters on an oculist's card, but everybody in the line I was in had committed the whole chart to memory the whole chart to earlier in the day.

I vaguely remember taking some official daredevil for a ride around the block. At the end he got out and gave me my license, laughing heartily as he filled it He must have thought I was kidding, or else the man was floundering in hysteria. Friends who've seen me in action behind the wheel incline toward the latter view. All I know is that its now perfectly legal for me to drive. I only wish I could.

In the early days of the gasoin the early days of the gaso-line engine timid folk were sup-posed to have often asked the pioneer chauffeurs if they knew how to stop the darn thing. There are many ways of stopping it, and I've tried them all. After I've stopped, that's when my trouble starts. There's a brick wall to get away from, or there's a cop to reason with, or something is missing from the ma-chinery—the distributor or the ex-

The common stall is my chief ailment. If a single light is against the bouse against me softween the house and work. I'm pretty sure to bring my car to a dead stand-still and have to push it by hand along the spacious boulevards to a garage while thousands honk.

Yesterday I had my regular Yesterday I had my regular breakdown in strange territory. I had ventured away from the accepted route in the hope of a short cut, or, better yet, a long rural road without traffic lights. I felt I was near as important discovery when a stop sign jumped out at me from ambush.

jumped out at me from ambush, and I did whatever it is I do to a car to make it stall.

I was pushed for awhile by a considerate Ford, but abandoned after five blocks. Where was I? Who is to say? Making toward civilization, by foot, I heedlessly neglected to park my trail, and the car hasn't been found yet.

Well triends with the behalf

Well, friends, with the help of friendly natives and a landmark I got out. The landmark did me the most good. It was my own.
The spire of a New England church built on my studio's back lot for the picture I'm making.

"Thier "The Stranger"). The plot, which I won't divuige, calls for the spire to be very tall. It rises above the low horizons of Hollywood, and even in the unknown neighborhood where the break n stranded me it was easy to

From there it looked so real, I asked a child if the church be-longed to the movies, but she didn't know. It cast a shadow over the stucco suburb as benev-olent, as inescapable as Chartres, but the little girl didn't know or care what it meant. I didn't blame

In this civilization of ad-men into which she was born there are many mansions, but most of them are cardboard. There is many a fine edifice to be seen, but most of these, like the sham church in Sam Goldwyn's backonuren in Sam Goldwins back-yard, won't keep the rain off a man's head. I figure the child and I and maybe you, need some-thing we can rely on, something that won't be torn down to make room for a new movie. It doesn't have to be a church, but it had better be something as good as churches are when they are good.

churches are when they are good. The promised hell and damnation of liberal preachment is now the fiery pit of the atomic bomb crater, and heaven is simply 60,000,000 jobs. But man, who is notorious for refusing to live by bread alone, is not likely to thrive on that formula. Sure, sure, if we aren't good children we'll go straight to Hiroshima, but I don't think just knowing that will make us behave. us behave.

No more can we keep the peace.

No more can we keep the peace by invoking the fear of war.

We will blow up the world with our new bombs if we allow our children to lose the love of truth or whatever it is you want to call the fife of the spirit. There is an eventuality more terrible than the total destruction of all human life. If there is four human life. If there is a fear that can save us it is this. ORSON WELLES

(Also Fine Stamochic Tonte))

(Alse Fine Samuchic Tenici)
Lytis E. Pinkham's Vogestable Compound is Jamour to relieve not only monthly pain but side accompanying nervous, tired, highertrung feelings—when due to functional pariodic disturbances. Taken regularly—it, being build up resistance against such distress, Finkham's Compound helps affect feeling fure! Follow, label directions. Try fit!

VERTARE

olydia E. Pinkhamis Carrent